

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

MONDAY, JUNE 12, 1911.

Published every week-day afternoon.
Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending last Saturday was copies, the largest circulation of any daily paper in Vermont outside of Burlington.

5,700

Left tackle Hobbs of Yale tackled a hard proposition when he irritated his unwilling pa-in-law, Andrus.

Those people who were finding fault with the dry spell are satisfied; they also know that nature preserves the balance pretty well.

The Williams college senior, who was chosen by his classmates as "most likely to succeed," enters the competition under awful handicap.

It seems that there ought to have been enough people, attendants and inmates, to stop that fatal fight in the Vermont Soldiers' Home at Bennington, when two disputing veterans came to blows.

In Ellen Fitz Pendleton, Wellesley college has its first native daughter for president, and the new official is so thoroughly imbued with the Wellesley spirit that success should crown her efforts. Princeton is now one of the few eastern colleges which are still without a president.

If the graduates live up to one-half the splendid advice contained in the usual baccalaureate discourse, they will have spent their lives better than the average of humanity. It is unfortunate that the summing-up of the principles of right living, which is contained in the baccalaureate, is not more often heeded.

Carrie Nation left no followers brave enough, and yet foolish enough, to follow her saloon-smashing tactics. It took a peculiar combination of courage and unreason to perform such tasks as the Kansas woman made herself famous with—courage because it took no small amount of confidence to enter saloons where she might suffer bodily harm, and unreason because of the utter futility of such temporary and local setbacks to the saloon as an institution.

In attempting to reach Montpelier from Waterbury, a distance of ten miles or thereabouts, a traveling salesman, so the story goes, was forced to travel about one hundred miles before arriving at his destination, because he boarded a north-bound train instead of a train going in the direction of Montpelier and because, after finally boarding a south bound train at Burlington, he went to sleep and was carried by Montpelier Junction as far as Northfield. This incident may be used as an argument in favor of placing Montpelier on the main line of the Central Vermont, but it illustrates also that the Central does not pass out brains to its passengers along with transportation.

MORRISVILLE'S EXPECTANCY.

With the acquisition of one of Hardwick's granite firms, Morrisville expects to receive considerable of a boom in business and population, together with some real estate activity. One of the newspapers takes the occasion to warn tenement owners not to jack up their prices in anticipation of the incoming of granite cutters, which is very timely, as Morrisville will find itself overbuilt in a short time if property owners become too hoggish; there will be a rush to build because of the expectation that rents will remain high and, in consequence, many tenements will have to remain idle, since the incoming of a single granite concern is not calculated to stir up a very large demand for tenements. Present owners of tenement property will, therefore, if they are wise, maintain much the same charges for rentals that they have kept under the normal growth of the village. Moreover, if the granite business at Morrisville should expand to any considerable extent there will be chance enough to construct tenements for the accommodation of the workmen.

COMMERCIAL HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES.

The lengthening of the commercial course of Spaulding high school to four years, so that it will conform with the other courses of the school, will surely strengthen that part of the work, and the efficiency of the business graduates will be appreciably increased since it will give them more time in which to perfect themselves in the details of office work, as well as the groundwork of education. The change, which takes effect at the opening of the next school year, is in line with the efforts to raise the standard of Spaulding high school in all departments, bringing them on a level with the character of work which has been maintained in the long-established courses. The new arrangement will enable all scholars entering the high school to continue a general course during the first two years and then specialize during the last two years in the commercial department. The two years' groundwork in the general courses will be particularly valuable because of the better grasp of English branches which will be afforded those intending to take up stenography, typewriting and the allied branches. At the same time the lengthening of the commercial course will give a more mature comprehension of the duties of business life when the graduates shall take positions of responsibility in offices and business. Even after a four years' stay in high school the graduates are none too old to begin active participation in business.

Mead had declined several similar invitations. ## Current Comment

Don't Be Hoggish.

"Made in Morrisville" will soon be applicable to the granite output of Wallace Bros., whose big new stone shed, one of the most up-to-date in Vermont, is completed. "Brooklyn" will grow and homes for the thirty or more families must be provided. Right here we wish to emphasize one thing, don't raise rents or make them higher than a reasonable interest on your investment demands. If you do it will injure Morrisville first and react on you later, as soon as other houses can be built. If Morrisville is to continue to grow, as she should grow, we must all work together for the good of the town. Our own best interests are best served thereby. Don't forget this.—Morrisville Messenger.

The Value of Some Deaths.

The wreck of Fairfield, Conn., one of the worst ever experienced on the New Haven railroad, in which five lives are known to have been lost, calls to mind the fact that there is practically nothing as cheap as human life. To consider human life as a commodity and then to place it in a market list as cheap, at first thought might seem to border on the barbaric, but a moment's reflection of the conditions in the slum districts of our great cities, of the terrific casualties of wars, of the awful ravages of famine and epidemics, must needs bring the truth of such a statement forcibly to mind.

Of deaths in railroad wrecks, however, there is a gratifying phase. Life in such cases is not sold cheaply without resulting benefits, benefits greater than in most cases where the human spark is extinguished. For every such death results in the instant and concentrated attention of brilliant minds to correct those mistakes which brought about the accidents. This has been the history of railroadroading, until to-day it is difficult to find a safer place than on a train which is plunging along at a mile a minute clip.

It is true that the greatest of care and caution, the application of the greatest of ingenuity cannot overcome the human element. No man is infallible; no man ever will be born of such an interesting estate, but each day brings some new device which does away with man's hand. Machinery becomes more reliable than man.

If humans took as much care of themselves as the railroads take of them, deaths on railroads would be few indeed. It is the trespasser, rather than the passenger, who is the victim, by the general rule.—St. Albans Messenger.

"Dinner of Deadly Enemies."

Lady Randolph Churchill once gave at her house in Connaught place what she called a dinner of deadly enemies. It was thought, says Mr. G. W. Smalley in his "Anglo-American Memories," a hazardous experiment. "It proved a complete success. They were all well behaved people. They all recognized their obligations to their hosts as paramount for the time being. In some cases ancient animosities were softened. In all they were suspended."

The Shoplifter.

Old Jed Shucks and his wife had visited New York city, and after they got home Jed was describing to his friends the wonders of city ways. "An' we went to a big department shop," he said, "an' we got inter one o' them 'ere things wot whizzes ye clean up to the top—what in tarnation is their name, ma?"

"Shoplifters, Jedediah," Mrs. Shucks replied.

Why, indeed? He—What would you say if I should kiss you? She—Why ask for a mere guess when you can so easily get the exact facts?—Boston Transcript.

The fine art of living is to draw from each person his best.—Whiting.

Jingles and Jest

Broadway on Saturday Night.

I'm sick of the city's mad bustle,
I long for the rivers and trees;
To list to the forest's soft rustle,
The cool, lazy murmur of bees.
I'd hie me away to the country,
To some sheltered spot of delight—
But nevertheless, not too far, I confess,
From Broadway on 'Saturday night!

I'm weary of lies, compromising,
I want to escape from it all,
To sit where the brook trout are rising,
And hark to some soft waterfall.
I pine to get back close to Nature,
Away from the false and the trite—
But nevertheless, not too far, I confess,
From Broadway on Saturday night!

Partiality.

"The inspector twisted one of his long, red mustaches and smiled a little grimly at the other."—Cassell's Magazine.

Why this favoritism?—Punch.

The Vanquished.

I don't see quite what I kin do
I thought of it across and through,
An' I don't seem no nearer than
I was the time I first began;
Sometimes I feel surprised at her,
An' then I feel a something stir
Here in my inwards that makes me
Want to bump that guy's head b'gee!

I don't blame her—an' can't blame him!
'Cause I'd like to land her-blim!
On him just once! I bet he'd be
A little more than shy of me
When he got out of ward 13!
Fate sometimes treats a feller mean—
She sure has given me a jolt
Like a sledge landin' on a bolt!

I ain't done nothin' that wa'n't square—
I bet I'd skewer him for fair.
If we lived in the olden days,
When fellers wore tin pants an' staves!
I bet she'd see I was some knight!
An' if he didn't dare to fight
I'd hunt him out where he hid at
An' put a dent in his tin hat.

But grouchin' don't do me no good—
I bet a bone I'll knock on wood.
An' give Cupid the high ball if
He ever aims another butt
At me. My little ten a week
Don't cut much ice! Gee, I'm a geek!
I don't blame him—an' can't blame her;
She's sweet—an' he draws eighteen per.
—Houston Post.

Illuminating.

A Fidgety Age.

Repose of manner was considered at one time essential to the well bred woman, but this is an ideal long consigned to the past. Every one fidgets in these restless days, no one has time to sit still nor to listen for more than a minute at a time without being bored and showing it.—London Queen.

GODDARD '11 GO TO CHURCH

der your hand. It may be the building of an honorable business, the execution of a piece of engineering, the building of a home, the fashioning of the child's mind and character. It may be a work of artistic beauty, or the humble occupation of a trade, a profession of influence, or the tilling of the soil. God means no man or woman to be permanently happy without creative work. Life is not in being but in making.

"But is this joy the most lasting? No, because the optimism of the worker is still largely self-centered. You can not see this a good world, a world to delight in. Do you know what has ever been the artist's temptation? He has the joy of creative work, but his thoughts and aims center in personal success. Do we not know the faintness of self sufficiency that is fatal to the self-made man?"

"Life is, on the whole, a serious business. It is too great and wonderful a mystery to be reckoned at our own terms. Slowly and surely to the self-seeker, the world is colored by his self-seeking interest and there is no longer blue in the sky nor green in the grass. If the joy of the early days is the joy of being, and manhood is the joy of doing, there is still remaining, the nobler joy of aspiring, the joy of faith. To rejoice in the Lord, what is it but to be doing a little of the Father's business, something other than one's own will and pleasure, business worth doing whether it always brings us gain or not? This is the happiness that Jesus knew."

"Young men and women, members of the graduating class, rejoice in your youth, make much of it. Be glad that you are alive in this latest of the years of God. You are going forth to an untried life. Keep the freshness of the spirit. That is the meaning of the test that lies before you. Care and pain and failure will try to rob you of your birthright of joy. Refuse to be so beggared. Remember these days but seize with gladness such share as comes to you of the world's work. In suffering and in darkness, as in sunshine and success, rejoice in the Lord always. Deepen your faith. Link your business to the Father's business. Love the best. Then though the outward perish, yet the inward man is renewed day after day. This is the happiness that earth cannot give or take away, and by your eventime it shall be light."

Mexico's Way With Women.

Woman's place in Mexican life is the inevitable mingling of the Moorish ideas of the Spanish conquerors and the savage ideas of the natives, the Milwaukee Sentinel says. The Castilian hides his wife and daughters behind stone walls and the picturesque lattices of romance, and he is their lord and master. On the other hand, the Indian tribes are, of course, still bound by the spirit of the ancient savage customs. Historians tell of one of the baptismal ceremonies of the Mexican tribes, who fought their way to supremacy long before the Spanish arrived on the scene. To each boy baby the priests chanted this command: "Thy profession and faculty is war, thy obligation to give the sun to drink blood of the enemies and the earth corpses of the foes." To the girl baby they said with far less ceremonial: "You are to stay within the house, as the heart does within the body. Our Lord enshrines you in that place, and your office is to fetch and to grind maize in the metate."

The beautiful seems right by force of beauty and the feeble wrong because of weakness.—Browning.
